THE HORTATORY AND ADMONITORY EPIGRAMS

THE first seventeen epigrams in this book, some very pretty, are chiefly addresses to harbour gods derived from all three of the main sources of the Anthology. We have next, with some epigrams from Agathias' Cycle and some others inserted, a large collection of the epigrams of Palladas of Alexandria a versifier as to whose merit there is much difference of opinion, but who is at least interesting as the sole poetical representative of his time and surroundings (Nos 18-99). Then we have (100-103) a short fragment of Philippus' Stephanus, and then a miscellany mostly not of epigrams but of verse extracts from literary sources.

1.—LEONIDAS

It is the season for sailing; already the chattering swallow has come, and the pleasant Zephyr, and the meadows bloom, and the sea with its boiling waves lashed by the rough winds has sunk to silence. Weigh the anchors and loose the hawsers, mariner, and sail with every stitch of canvas set. This, O man, I, Priapus, the god of the harbour, bid thee do that thou mayst sail for all kinds of merchandise.

2.—ANTIPATER OF SIDON

It is the season for the ship to travel tearing through the waves; no longer does the sea toss, furrowed by dreadful fret. Already the swallow is building her round houses under the roof, and the tender leaves of the meadows smile. Therefore, ye sailors, coil your wet hawsers and drag the anchors from their nests in the harbour. Haul up your well-woven sails This is the bidding of me, Priapus of the harbour, the son of Bromius.

3.—ANONYMOUS

THE way down to Hades is straight, whether you start from Athens or whether you betake yourself there, when dead, from Meroe. Let it not vex thee to die far from thy country. One fair wind to Hades blows from all lands.<sup>1</sup>

4.—MARCUS ARGENTARIUS

LOOSE the long hawsers from your well-moored ships, and spreading your easily-hoisted sails set to sea, merchant captain For the storms have taken flight and tenderly laughing Zephyr now makes the blue wave gentle as a girl. Already the swallow, fond parent, is building with its lisping lips its chamber out of mud and straw, and flowers spring up in the land; therefore listen to Priapus and undertake any kind of navigation.

5.—THYILLUS

ALREADY the swallows build their mud houses, already on the flood Zephyr is bosomed in the soft sails Already the meadows shed flowers over their green leaves, and the rough strait closes its lips in silence Wind up your hawsers and stow the anchors on shipboard, and give all your canvas to the sheets. This is the advice that Priapus of the harbour writes for you who sail the seas seeking merchandise.

6.—SATYRUS

ALREADY the moist breath of Zephyr, who giveth birth to the grass, falls gently on the flowery meads The daughters of Cecrops<sup>1</sup> call, the becalmed sea smiles, untroubled by the cold winds Be of good heart, ye sailors, loose your hawsers and spread out the delicate folds of your ships' wings. Go to trade trusting in gracious Priapus, go obedient to the harbour god.

7.—ARCHIAS

STRANGER, I, Priapus, was set up on this sea-beaten rock to guard the Thracian strait,<sup>2</sup> by the sailors, whom I had often rushed to help when they called upon me, bringing from astern the sweet Zephyr. Therefore, as is meet and right, thou shalt never see my altar lacking the fat of beasts or crowns in the spring, but ever smoking with incense and alight. Yet not even a hecatomb is so pleasing to the gods as due honour.

8.—BY THE SAME

LITTLE am I to look on, Priapus, who dwell on this spur by the beach, companion of the gulls, denizens of land and sea, with a peaked head and no feet, just such as the sons of toiling fishermen would carve on the desert shore But if any netsman or rod-fisher call on me for help, I hie me to him quicker than the wind. I see, too, the creatures that move under the water, and indeed the character of us gods is known rather from our actions than from our shapes.

YE fishermen, who pulled your little boat ashore here (Go, hang out your nets to dry) having had a haul of many sea-swimming gurnard (?) and scarus, not without thrissa,<sup>1</sup> honour me with slender first-fruits of a copious catch, the little Priapus under the lentisc bush, the sea-blue god, the revealer of the fish your prey, established in this grove.

10.—ARCHIAS THE YOUNGER

THE fishermen dedicated me, Pan, here on this holy cliff, Pan of the shore, the guardian of this secure haven. Sometimes I care for the weels, and sometimes for the fishers who draw their seine on this beach. But, stranger, sail past, and in return for this beneficence I will send a gentle south-west wind at thy back.

ALREADY the fair-foliaged field, at her fruitful birth-tide, is aflower with roses bursting from their buds; already on the branches of the alleyed cypresses the cicada, mad for music, soothes the sheaf-binder, and the swallow, loving parent, has made her house under the eaves and shelters her brood in the mud-plastered chamber. The sea sleeps, the calm dear to the Zephyrs spreads tranquilly over the expanse that bears the ships. No longer do the waters rage against the high-built poops, or belch forth spray on the shore. Mariner, roast first by his altar to Priapus, the lord of the deep and the giver of good havens, a slice of a cuttle-fish or of lustred red mullet, or a vocal scarus, and then go fearlessly on thy voyage to the bounds of the Ionian Sea.

Ithaca, grant that I may sail to the Asian land through favouring waves in the wake of Piso's long ship. And attune my doughty emperor to be kind to him and kind to my verses.<sup>1</sup>

26.—LUCIAN

ENJOY thy possessions as if about to die, and use thy goods sparingly as if about to live. That man is wise who understands both these commandments, and hath applied a measure both to thrift and unthrift.

27.—BY THE SAME

IF thou doest any foul thing it may perchance be hidden from men, but from the gods it shall not be hidden, even if thou but thinkest of it.

28.—BY THE SAME

FOR men who are fortunate all life is short, but for those who fall into misfortune one night is infinite time.

29.—BY THE SAME

IT is not Love that wrongs the race of men, but Love is an excuse for the souls of the dissolute.

46.—BY THE SAME

SILENCE is men's chief learning. The sage Pythagoras himself is my witness. He, knowing himself how to speak, taught others to be silent, having discovered this potent drug to ensure tranquillity.

47.—BY THE SAME

EAT and drink and keep silence in mourning; for we should not, as Homer said, mourn the dead with our belly. Yes, and he shows us Niobe, who buried her twelve dead children all together, taking thought for food.<sup>1</sup>

48.—BY THE SAME

IT is a proverb, that no woman who has been a slave should ever become a mistress. I will tell you something similar. "Let no man who has been an advocate ever become a judge, not even if he be a greater orator than Isocrates. For how can a man who has served for hire in a fashion no more respectable than a whore judge a case otherwise than dirtily?"

49.—BY THE SAME

THEY say that even ants and gnats have bile. So, while the most insignificant beasts have bile, do you bid me have no bile and lie exposed to the attacks of all the world, not even wronging by mere words those who wrong me by deeds? I have for the rest of my life to stop up my mouth with a rush<sup>2</sup> and not even breathe.

<sup>2</sup> A phrase borrowed from Aeschines, 31, 5, but there it is "to sew up," which is more intelligible.

50.—BY THE SAME

I DENY that Circe, as Homer says, changed those who visited her from men into pigs or wolves. No! she was a cunning courtesan, and made them who took her bait poorest of the poor. Stripping them of their human sense, she now, when they could gain nothing for themselves, reared them in her house like senseless animals. But Ulysses, having his wits about him and avoiding the folly of youth, possessed a counter-charm to enchantment, his own nature, not Hermes,<sup>1</sup> emplanting reason in him.

51.—BY THE SAME

ENVY, says Pindar, is better than pity.<sup>2</sup> Those who are envied lead a splendid life, while our pity is for the excessively unfortunate. I would be neither too fortunate nor too badly off; for the mean is best, since the height of fortune is apt to bring danger, while the depth of misery exposes to insult.

54.—BY THE SAME

CONSUMPTION is not the only cause of death, but extreme obesity often has the same result. Dionysius, tyrant of the Pontic Heraclea, testifies to this, for it is what befel him.

55.—BY THE SAME

If you boast that you don't in any way obey your wife's orders, you are talking nonsense: for you are not made of tree or stone, as the saying is,<sup>1</sup> and you suffer what most or all of us suffer, you are ruled by a woman. But if you say, "She does not smack me with her slipper, nor have I an unchaste wife whom I must put up with and shut my eyes," I say your servitude is milder than that of others, as you have sold yourself to a chaste and not very severe mistress.

56.—BY THE SAME

THERE is no manifest sign of chastity: this I tell husbands who are made fools of. Neither are ill-looks quite free from suspicion, nor is every pretty woman naturally vicious. WHERE, I ask, is that vast insolence? And where have they suddenly departed, the crowds of flatterers who used to walk by your side? Now you are gone a portable coffin and not, as I suppose, a stone one, M. is right.

to exile far from the city, and Fortune has made those whom you formerly pitted judges to condemn you. • Great thanks to thee, Fortune, performer of glorious deeds, for that thou ever mockest all alike and we have that to amuse us.

65.—PALLADAS

LIFE is a perilous voyage; for often we are tempest-tossed in it and are in a worse case than shipwrecked men. With Fortune at Life's helm we sail uncertainly as on the open sea, some on a fair voyage, others the reverse: but all alike reach one harbour under the earth.

66.—AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS

WHEN a man rises from poverty to wealth and office, he no longer recognizes what he once was. For he repudiates his former friendships, and in his folly learns not how playful slippery fortune is. You were once a miserable pauper, and now you who used to "beg for a pittance"<sup>1</sup> refuse it to others. My friend, everything that is man's passes away, and if you will not believe it you may go begging again and testify to it yourself.

68.—AGATHIAS

It is good to have a mind that hates sexual intercourse, but if you must, let not the love of males ever disturb you. It is a small evil to love women, for gracious Nature gave them the gift of amorous dalliance. Look at the race of beasts; not one of them dishonours the laws of intercourse, for the female couples with the male. But wretched men introduce a strange union between each other.

69.—BY THE SAME

WHY fear death, the mother of rest, death that puts an end to sickness and the pains of poverty? It happens but once to mortals, and no man ever saw it come twice. But diseases are many and various, coming first to this man, then to that, and ever changing.

70.—MACEDONIUS THE CONSUL

IF the Hopes, the companions of Fortune, make sport of human life, delaying to grant every favour, I am their plaything if I am human, and being mortal, I well know I am human. But being the sport of long-deferred hopes, I am willing and pleased to be deceived, and would not in judging myself be as severe as Aristotle,<sup>1</sup> for I bear in mind Anacreon's advice<sup>2</sup> that we should not let care abide with us.

BOOK X. EPIGRAMS 71-74

71.—BY THE SAME

I SMILE when I look on the picture of Pandora's jar, and do not find it was the woman's fault, but is due to the Goods having wings.<sup>1</sup> For as they flutter to Olympus after visiting every region of the world, they ought to fall on the earth too. The woman after taking off the lid grew pale-faced, and has lost the splendour of her former charm. Our present life has suffered two losses; a woman is grown old and the jar has nothing in it.

72.—PALLADAS

ALL life is a stage and a play: either learn to play laying your gravity aside, or bear with life's pains.

73.—BY THE SAME

If the gale of Fortune bear thee, bear with it and be borne; but if thou rebellest and tormentest thyself, even so the gale bears thee.

74 —PAULUS SILENTIARIUS

NEITHER be lifted up by the strong blast of opulent fortune, nor let care bend thy freedom. For all thy life is shaken by inconstant breezes and is constantly dragged this way and that; but virtue is the steadfast and constant support on which alone thou canst travel boldly over the waves of life.

Pandora symbolise womankind in general. The second couplet seems to mean that Pandora thought the Goods would light on earth, but that, instead, they all flew up to the sky.

BOOK X. EPIGRAMS 75-77

75.—PALLADAS

We live—all who live as this life is—and gaze on the flame of the sun, breathing through our nostrils delicate air; we are organs which receive health as a gift from the life-creating breezes. But if anyone with his hand presses tightly a little of our breath, he robs us of our life and brings us down to Hades. So being nothing we are fed*with vanity, pasturing on air drawn from a breath of wind.

76.—PAULUS SILENTIARIUS

THERE is no natural pleasure in life itself, but in casting off from our mind anxieties that whiten the temples. I wish for sufficient wealth, but mad lust for gold is a superfluous care that ever devours the heart. Therefore among men thou shalt often find poverty better than wealth, and death than life. Knowing this, make straight the ways of thy heart, looking to one hope, even to wisdom.

77.—PALLADAS

WHY dost thou labour in vain, O man, and disturb everything, being, as thou art, the slave of the lot that fell to thee at birth? Resign thyself to this, and struggle not against Fate, but content with thy fortune, love tranquillity. Yet strive thou rather, even against Fate, to lead thy delighted spirit to mirth.

CAST away complaint and be not troubled, for how brief is the time thou dwellest here compared with all the life that follows this! Ere thou breedest worms and art cast into the tomb torment not thy soul, as if it were damned while thou still livest.

79.—BY THE SAME

WE are born day by day when night departs, retaining nothing of our former life, estranged from the doings of yesterday and beginning to-day the remainder of our life. Do not then, old man, say thy years are too many, for to-day thou hast no part in those that have gone by.

80.—BY THE SAME

THE life of men is the plaything of Fortune, a wretched life and a vagrant, tossed between riches and poverty. Some whom she had cast down she casteth on high again like a ball, and others she brings down from the clouds to Hades.

81.—BY THE SAME

90.—BY THE SAME

ALAS for the extreme malice of envy! A man hates the fortunate whom God loves. So senselessly are we led astray by envy; so ready are we to be the slaves of folly. We Greeks are men reduced to ashes, having the buried hopes of the dead; for to-day everything is turned upside down<sup>1</sup>

91.—BY THE SAME

HE who detests a man whom God loves, is guilty of the greatest folly, for he manifestly takes up arms against God himself, being gifted by envy with excessive spite. One should rather love him whom God loves.

It is hard, however, to find any connexion in thought between lines 1-4 and what follows, and I quite fail to see any point in No 89.

all, and briefer yet is the space of our prime. Therefore, while the season is ours, let all be in plenty, song, love, carousal. Henceforth is the winter of heavy
eld. Thou wouldest give ten minae<sup>2</sup> to be a man, but no! such fetters shall be set on thy manhood.

<sup>1</sup> About fifty pounds.

101.—BIANOR

Look, the heifer draws the instrument that cuts the earth, and is followed by the calf she is suckling!
She dreads the husbandman at her heels, and waits for her little one, sagaciously careful of both. Thou who followest the plough up and down the field, who turnest up the soil, hold thy hand, nor drive her who bears the double burden of two labours.

102.—BASSUS

I would not have the fierce sea drive me in storm, nor do I welcome the dull windless calm that follows.
The mean is best, and so likewise where men do their business, I welcome the sufficient measure.
Be content with this, dear Lampis, and hate evn tempests, there are gentle Zephyrs in life too.

103.—PHILODEMUS

NEITHER look into nor pass by (the place where they sell scarce delicacies?). Now be off to the tripestall to spend a drachma.<sup>1</sup> One fig too at times may cost a drachma, but if you wait, it will buy you a thousand. Time is the poor man's god.

BOOK XI

THE CONVIVIAL AND SATIRICAL EPIGRAMS

THIS book is divided in the MS into two sections, the Convivial Epigrams, Nos 1-64, and the Satirical Epigrams, No 65 to the end, the former section, not exclusively convivial, being in part at least derived from the Stephanus of Philippus (8-9, 23-46, 49-50) and the Cycle of Agathias (57-61, 63-64). The second section, the Satirical poems, while containing much of the work of Palladas, with whom readers became acquainted in the preceding Book a very limited numeroe of poems from the Stephanus of Philippus (158, 168, 318-322, 324-327, 346-349) and a few by Agathias and Macedonius, is largely the work of two writers much allied in style, Lucilius and Nicarchus (we may add Ammianus), whose contributions are not derived from the main sources of the Anthology. Lucilius lived in the time of Nero, and Nicarchus probably was contemporary. They both very much remind us of Martial, who probably had read them. There is plenty of evidence that Nicarchus wrote in Alexandria, and I think the same may be true of Lucilius (see No 212). There are very few epigrams in this book (195, 218, 223, 362-3) from the Stephanus of Meleager.

1.—NICARCHUS

At the feast of Hermes, Aphrodisius, as he was carrying six choes<sup>1</sup> of wine, stumbled and threw us into deep mourning. “Wine was the death even of the Centaurs.”<sup>2</sup> Would it had been ours; but now it is it we have lost.<sup>3</sup>

2.—CALLICTER

3.—ANONYMOUS

I WOULD have liked to be as rich as Croesus once was, and to be king of great Asia. But when I look at Nicanor the coffin-maker and learn what these flute-cases<sup>5</sup> he is making are meant for, I sprinkle my flour<sup>6</sup> no matter where, and moistening it with my pint of wine I sell Asia for scent and garlands.

<sup>1</sup> We cannot tell the occasion of this epigram, but Theodorus seems to be a doctor and the joke turns on “stones.”

<sup>2</sup> So he facetiously calls the coffins.

4.—PARMENION

A CERTAIN man, having married a woman who is complaisant to his neighbour only, snores and feeds. That was the way to get a living easily—not to go to sea, not to dig, but to snore off one's dinner with a comfortable stomach, fattened richly at the expense of another.

6.—BY THE SAME

A POOR man's marriage is a dog-fight, at once the roar of battle, abuse, blows, damage, trouble and law-suits.

7.—NICARCHUS

No one, Charidemus, can constantly sleep with his own wife and take heart-felt pleasure in it. Our nature is so fond of titillation, such a luster after foreign flesh, that it persists in seeking the illusion of a strange caze.

8.—ANONYMOUS

INVITED to dinner yesterday, when it was time for my siesta, I rested my head on the Gorgon's pillow or Niobe's,<sup>2</sup> a pillow which none wove, but someone sawed or hacked out of the quarry and brought to Proclus' house. If I had not woke up very soon and left it, Proclus would have made his pillow into a grave-stone or coffin for me.

44.—PHILODEMUS

TO-MORROW, dearest Piso,<sup>1</sup> your friend, beloved by the Muses, who keeps our annual feast of the twentieth<sup>2</sup> invites you to come after the ninth hour to his simple cottage. If you miss udders and draughts of Chian wine, you will see at least sincere friends and you will hear things far sweeter than the land of the Phaeacians.<sup>3</sup> But if you ever cast your eyes on me,<sup>4</sup> Piso, we shall celebrate the twentieth richly instead of simply.

45.—HONESTUS

DRINK which we wish ourselves is ever the sweetest; what is forced on us does outrage to the wine as well as to the drinker. The drinker will spill the wine on the earth secretly, and, if he drink it, it will often take him under the earth to the bitter water of Lethe. Farewell, ye topers; as much as I like to drink is to me the sufficient measure of all enjoyment.

<sup>3</sup> i.e. sweeter discourse than the story of Ulysses which he told in Phaeacia.

<sup>4</sup> He seeks his patronage and support.

49.—EVENUS

THE best measure of wine is neither much nor very little; for it is the cause of either grief or sadness. It pleases the wine to be the fourth, mixed with three Nymphs.<sup>1</sup> Then it is most suited for the bridal chamber too, but if it breathe too eagerly, it puts the Loves to flight and plunges us in sleep which is neighbour to death.

50.—AUTOMEDON

BLEST is he first who owes naught to anyone, next one who never married, and thirdly he who is childless.
But if a man be mad enough to marry, it is a blessing for him if he buries his wife at once after getting a handsome dowry. Knowing this, be wise, and leave Epicurus to enquire in vain where is the void and what are the atoms.

58.—MACEDONIUS THE CONSUL

I WISH not for gold, nor for the myriad cities of the world, nor for all that Homer said Thebes contained, but I would have the rounded bowl overflow with wine and my lips be bathed by a perpetual stream I would have the gossiping company of those I revere drink with me while over-industrious folk labour at the vines That for me is the great wealth ever dear to me, and when I hold the bowl I care naught for consuls resplendent with gold.

man-killing care. Let toiling rustics supply their bread-tolerating bellies with the mother of black-robed Persephone,<sup>1</sup> and we will leave to wild beasts and birds that feed on raw flesh the copious and bloody banquets of meat of slain bulls. Let us surrender the bones of fish that cut the skin to the lips of men to whom Hades is dearer than the sun. But for us let wine the bountiful be ever food and drink, and let others long for ambrosia.

64.—AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS

We treading the plenteous fruit of Bacchus were weaving in a band the rhythmic revellers' dance. Already a vast flood was running down, and the cups like boats were swimming on the sweet surges Dipping therewith we soon had improvised a carouse in no great need of the hot Naiads.<sup>2</sup> But pretty Rhodanthe stooping over the vat made the stream glorious with the radiance of her beauty. The alert spirits of all were shaken from their seat, nor was there one who was not conquered by Bacchus and the Paphian. Poor wretches, his stream flowed at our feet in abundance, but we were mocked by hope alone of her.

71.—NICARCHUS

NICONOE was once in her prime, I admit that, but her prime was when Deucalion looked on the vast waters. Of those times we have no knowledge, but of her now we know that she should seek not a husband, but a tomb.

72.—BASSUS OF SMYRNA

CYTOTARIS with her grey temples, the garrulous old woman, who makes Nestor no longer the oldest of men, she who has looked on the light longer than a stag<sup>1</sup> and has begun to reckon her second old age on her left hand,<sup>2</sup> is alive and sharp-sighted and firm on her legs like a bride, so that I wonder if something has not befallen Death.

73.—NICARCHUS

A HANDSOME old woman (why deny it?) you know she was, when she was young ; but then she asked for money while now she is ready to pay her mount. You will find her an artist, and when she has had something to drink then all the more you will have her submissive to whatever you want. For she drinks, if you consent, three or four pints, and then things are all topsy-turvy with her ; she clings, she scratches, she plays the pathic ; and if one gives her anything, she accepts, if not, the pleasure is her payment.

units The meaning then, I suppose, is that she has reached a thousand and is now counting the years of the first century of her next thousand which he calls her second old age.

TURN out that stone-deaf old woman, Onesimus, for God's sake, she is such a nuisance to me. If we tell her to bring soft cheeses (turoi), she comes not with cheeses, but with fresh grains of wheat (puroi). The other day I had a headache and asked her for rue (peganon) and she brought me an earthenware frying-pan (teganon) ; if I ask her for —— she brings me a rafter ; if I say when I am hungry, " Give me some greens " (lachanon), she at once brings a night-stool (lasanon). If I ask for vinegar (oxos), she brings me a bow (toxon), and if I ask for a bow, she brings vinegar ; in fact she does not comprehend a word I say. It would disgrace me to become a crier all for the sake of the old woman, and to get up at night and practise outside the town.

WHEN Ulysses after twenty years came safe to his home, Argos the dog recognised his appearance when he saw him, but you, Stratophon, after boxing for four hours, have become not only unrecognisable to dogs but to the city. If you will trouble to look at your face in a glass, you will say on your oath, "I am not Stratophon."

CLEOMBROTUS ceased to be a pugilist, but afterwards married and now has at home all the blows of the Isthmian and Nemean games, a pugnacious old woman hitting as hard as in the Olympian fights, and he dreads his own house more than he ever dreaded the ring. Whenever he gets his wind, he is beaten with all the strokes known in every match to make him pay her his debt<sup>1</sup>; and if he pays it, he is beaten again.

116.—BY THE SAME

LORD Caesar, as they tell, Eurystheus once sent down great Heracles to the house of Hades; but now Menophanes the physician has sent me. So let him be called Doctor Eurystheus and no longer Doctor Menophanes.

117.—STRATO

THE physician Capito anointed Chryses' eyes then when he could see a high tower from a mile off and a man from a furlong and a quail from ten yards and a louse even from a foot. Now from a furlong he cannot see the town and from two hundred feet cannot see that the lighthouse is alight; he scarcely sees a horse from half a foot off and as for the quail he once saw, he can't even see a large ostrich. If he manages to give him another dose, he won't ever after be able to see even an elephant standing close to him.

118—CALLICTER

PHIDON did not purge me with a clyster or even feel me, but feeling feverish I remembered his name and died.

119.—BY THE SAME

WHETHER the doctor purged or strangled the old woman no one knows, but it was terribly sudden. The noise of the clyster was in our ears<sup>1</sup> and her bier was being crowned and the rest prepared the pease-pudding.<sup>2</sup>

THE physician Crateas and the sexton Damon made a joint conspiracy. Damon sent the wrappings he stole from the grave-clothes to his dear Crateas to use as bandages and Crateas in return sent him all his patients to bury.

126.—ANONYMOUS

CHARINUS anointed my eye not with a spatula, but with a three-pronged fork, and he had a new sponge like those used for paintings. In pulling out the spatula he tore out my eye from the roots and the whole spatula remained inside. But if he anoints me twice, I shall not trouble him any more by suffering from sore eyes; for how can a man who no longer has eyes do so?

can't say he has parapythia<sup>2</sup> as well.

130.—POLLIANUS

I HATE these cyclic<sup>3</sup> poets who say "nathless eftsoon," filchers of the verses of others, and so I pay more attention to elegies, for there is nothing I want to steal from Callimachus or Parthenius. Let me become like an "eared beast"<sup>4</sup> if ever I write

131.—LUCILIUS

NOR water in Deucalion's day when all became water, nor Phaethon who burned up the inhabitants of the earth, slew so many men as Potamon the poet and Hermogenes by his surgery killed. So from the beginning of the ages there have been these four curses, Deucalion, Phaethon, Hermogenes and Potamon.

132.—BY THE SAME

I HATE, Lord Caesar, those who are never pleased with any young writer, even if he says "Sing, O Goddess, the wrath," but if a man is not as old as Priam, if he is not half bald and not so very much bent, they say he can't write a b c. But, Zeus most high, if this really be so, wisdom visits but the ruptured.

133.—BY THE SAME

EUTYCHIDES the lyric poet is dead. Fly, ye people who dwell under earth; Eutychides is coming with odes, and he ordered them to burn with him twelve lyres and twenty-five cases of music. Now indeed Charon has got hold of you. Where can one depart to in future, since Eutychides is established in Hades too?

BOOK XI. EPIGRAMS 145-148

For not even if you say "quaked," and "clangs," and "hisses," and "gurgled," will you be a Homer at once. Sense should underlie literature, and its phraseology be more vulgar so that people may understand what you say.

145.—ANONYMOUS

146.—AMMIANUS

I SENT Flaccus the rhetor a present of seven solecisms and received back five times two hundred. And "Now," he says, "I send you these by the hundred, but in future when I get to Cyprus<sup>2</sup> I will send them by the bushel."

147.—BY THE SAME

ASIATICUS has suddenly become an orator. Nothing incredible in that! It is only another miracle in Thebes.<sup>3</sup>

148.—LUCILIUS

FLACCUS the rhetor made solecisms the other day without even speaking, and when he was about to yawn at once was guilty of a barbarism, and now goes on making solecisms by signs with his hand, and I, seeing him, am tongue-tied.<sup>4</sup>

I SEE the very image of you, Medon the rhetor.
Well, what is there surprising in that? You have Nothing could be more like.

“THE rhetor Athenagoras in consequence of a dream dedicated an Arcadian hat to Arcadian Hermes.” If he is a rhetor, too, in a dream only, we will take it so inscribed to Hermes, but if he is a real one, let “Athenagoras dedicated this” suffice.<sup>1</sup>

154.—BY THE SAME

EVERYONE who is poor and illiterate does not grind corn as formerly or carry burdens for small pay, but grows a beard and picking up a stick from the cross-roads, calls himself the chief dog of virtue. This is the sage pronouncement of Hermodotus, “ If anyone is penniless, let him throw off his shirt<sup>1</sup> and no longer starve.”

155.—BY THE SAME

“ THIS solid adamant of virtue, this rebuker of everyone, this fighter with the cold, with his long beard, has been caught.” “ At what?” “ It is not proper to say at what, but he was caught doing things that foul-mouthed people do.”

156.—AMMIANUS

Do you suppose that your beard creates brains and therefore you grow that fly-flapper? Take my advice and shave it off at once; for that beard is a creator of lice and not of brains.

157.—BY THE SAME

“ Good Sir” and “ Can it be?” and “ Whence, sirrah, and whither?” and “ Right off” and “ Go to” and “ Quite so” and “ Hie ye” and cloakie and little lock and beardie, and “ Keep your little shoulder bare” — that is what present-day philosophy flourishes on.<sup>2</sup>

163.—LUCILIUS

ONESIMUS the wrestler and the pentathlist Hylas and the runner Meneclles came to the prophet Olympus wishing to know which of them was going to win at the games, and he, after inspecting the sacrifice, said, "You will all win—unless anyone passes you, Sir, or unless anyone throws you, Sir, or unless anyone runs past you, Sir."

184.—BY THE SAME

FROM the Hesperides' Garden of Zeus,<sup>1</sup> Meniscus, as Heracles did formerly, carried off three golden apples. Well, what happened? When he was caught he became a famous spectacle for all, burning alive, like Heracles of old.

On Singers and Actors (185-189)

185.—BY THE SAME

HEGOLOCHUS, my Lord Caesar, once emptied a Greek city by appearing to sing the part of Nauplius.<sup>2</sup> Nauplius is ever an evil to the Greeks, either sending a great wave on their ships or having a lyre-singer to play his part.

186.—NICARCHUS

THE night-raven's song bodes death, but when Demophilus sings the night-raven itself dies.

187.—LEONIDAS OF ALEXANDRIA

SIMYLUS the lyre-player killed all his neighbours by playing the whole night, except only Origenes, whom Nature had made deaf, and therefore gave him longer life in the place of hearing.

188.—AMMIANUS

NICETAS when he sings is the Apollo<sup>3</sup> of the songs, and when he doctors, of the patients.

* Nauplius caused the destruction of the Greek fleet on its return from Troy by exhibiting deceptive beacons.

"ARES, Ares, destroyer of men, blood-fiend,"<sup>2</sup> cease, barber, from cutting me, for you have no place left in which to cut me. But change now to my muscles and my legs below the knees, and cut me there, and I will let you. ### 311.—BY THE SAME

PANTAE NETUS is so lazy that when he fell sick of a fever he prayed to every god never to get up again And now he leaves his bed unwillingly, and in his heart blames the deaf ears of the unjust gods.

312.—BY THE SAME

THOUGH there is no one dead here now, O passer-by, Marcus the poet built a tomb here, and writing an inscription of one line as follows, engraved it: "Weep for twelve year old Maximus from Ephesus." I (says the tomb) never even saw any Maximus, but to show off the poet's talent I bid the passer-by weep.<sup>1</sup>

313.—BY THE SAME

ONE, bidding me to a banquet, killed me with silver hunger, serving famished dishes. And in wrath I spoke amid the silver sheen of hunger: "Where is the plenty of my earthenware dishes?"

314.—BY THE SAME

I SOUGHT whence I should say the word pinakes (dishes) was derived, and on being invited by you I found out why they are so called. For you placed before me great pinakes of great peina (hunger), famished dishes, instruments of famine.

315.—BY THE SAME

ANTIOCHUS once set eyes on Lysimachus' cushion, and Lysimachus never set eyes on it again.

<sup>1</sup> This phrase in Greek has also the sense of "to send to the deuce."

316.—ANONYMOUS

MILo the wrestler was once the only one who came to the sacred games, and the steward of the games called him to crown him at once. But as he was approaching he slipped and fell on his back, and the people called out: "Do not crown this man, as he got a fall when he was alone!" But he, standing up in their midst, shouted back. "Are there not three falls<sup>1</sup> I fell once; now let someone give me the other two."

317.—PALLADAS

SOMEONE gave me a long-suffering donkey that moves backwards as much as forward<sup>2</sup> their journey's haven to those who ride on it; a donkey, the son of slowness, a labour, a delay, a dream,<sup>3</sup> but first instead of last<sup>4</sup> for those who are retiring.

318.—PHILODEMUS

ANTICRATES knew the constellations much better than Aratus, but could not tell his own nativity; for he said he was in doubt whether he was born in the Ram or the Twins, or in both the Fishes. But it was clearly found to be in all three, for he is a tupper and a fool, and effeminate, and fond of fish<sup>5</sup>

320.—ARGENTARIUS

PHILOSTRATUS loved Antigone. He was poorer by five cubits, poor fellow, than Irus. The cold, however, taught him a sweet remedy; for tucking up his knees (with antia gonata) he slept so, stranger, with Antigone.

321.—PHILIPPUS

330.—BY THE SAME

I WAS invited yesterday, Demetrius, and came to supper to-day. Don't find fault with me; you have a long staircase. I spent an age on it, and I should not have got safe up it to-day only I came up holding on to a donkey's tail. You touch the stars: Zeus, it seems, when he ran away with Ganymede, went up with him by this route. But from here how long will it take you to reach Hades? You are not wanting in cleverness; you have hit on a trick for being immortal.

346.—AUTOMEDON

How long, Polycarpus, sitting to feast at an empty table,<sup>3</sup> shall you live undetected on the savings of others? I no longer see you much in the market-place, but you now turn up side streets and try to think where your feet shall carry you. You promise all, "Come, take yours to-morrow. Come and get it": but not even if you take your oath do you continue to keep faith. "The wind bearing thee from Cyzicus brought thee to Samothrace": this is the goal that awaits you for the rest of your life.

"How should we describe the soul, as mortal or rather immortal? Must we call it a body or incorporeal? Is it to be classed among intelligible or apprehensible things, or is it both?" But he perused again his books of metaphysic and Aristotle's work on the Soul, and having renewed his acquaintance with Plato's sublimity in the Phaedo, armed himself from every source with the complete truth. Then, wrapping his cloak about him and stroking down the end of his beard, he gave utter-

Thou wouldest hear and I, too, would speak; for the wish gives birth to double pleasure, while elegance on the speaker's part and gravity on the hearer's bestow double beauty on the speech. MAKE your fleshless cheeks always smooth with white lead, Laodice (just, indeed, is the penalty you pay the people),<sup>1</sup> but never open your lips wide, for who by cosmetic fraud shall fix a row of teeth there? You have shed all the beauty you had; loveliness of limb cannot be drawn from a perennial fountain like a rose you flourished in the spring, now you are withered, dried by the parching summer of old age.

375.—BY THE SAME

I SNEEZED near a tomb and wished to hear of what I hoped, the death of my wife. I sneezed to the winds, but my wife meets with none of the misfortunes of mankind, neither illness nor death.

376.—AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS

AN unhappy man, going to the rhetor Diodorus, consulted him about the following case "My slave-girl ran away once and a certain man found her, and knowing her to be another man's servant married her to his own slave. She bore him children, and I wish to know whose slaves they legally are." When he had considered and looked up every book, he said, twisting his eyebrows into a semi-circle: "Those about whom you enquire must either be your slaves or those of the man who took your slave-girl. Seek a well-disposed judge and you will at once get a more favourable decision, at least if what you say is just."

378.—BY THE SAME

I CANNOT put up with a wife and with Grammar too, Grammar that is penniless and a wife who is injurious. What I suffer from both is Death and Fate. Now I have just with difficulty escaped from Grammar, but I cannot escape from this shrewish wife, for our contract and Roman law prevent it.

379.—AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS

No one has the courage to look on your grinders so that none approach your house, for if you always have the famine of Erysichthon<sup>2</sup> himself you will even perhaps devour the friend you invite. Your halls will never see me enter them, for I am not going there to be kept for your belly. But if I ever do go to your house it was no great prowess of Ulysses to face the jaws of Scylla. Rather shall I be much more “all-daring” than he, if I manage to get past you who are no less fearful than the heart-chilling Cyclops.

EVERY woman is a source of annoyance, but she has two good seasons, the one in her bridal chamber and the other when she is dead.

382.—AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS

ALCIMENES lay in bed sore sick of a fever and giving vent to hoarse wheezings from his wind-pipe, his side pricking him as if he had been pierced by a sword, and his breath coming short in ill-sounding gasps. Then came Callignotus of Cos, with his never-ending jaw, full of the wisdom of the healing art, whose prognosis of pains was complete, and he never foretold anything but what came to pass. He inspected Alcimenes' position in bed and drew conclusions from his face, and felt his pulse scientifically. Then he reckoned up from the treatise on critical days, calculating everything not without his Hippocrates, and finally he gave utterance to Alcimenes of his prognosis, making his face very solemn and looking most serious. "If your throat stops roaring and the fierce attacks of pain in your side cease, and your breathing is no longer made thick by the fever, you will not die in that case of pleurisy, for this is to us a sign of coming freedom

To the Gout

GODDESS who hatest the poor, sole vanquisher of wealth, who ever knowest to live well, even though it is thy joy to sit on the feet of others, thou knowest how to wear felt,<sup>1</sup> and thou art fond of ointments. A garland delights thee and draughts of Italian wine.<sup>2</sup> These things are never found among the poor. Therefore thou fliest the brassless threshold<sup>3</sup> of poverty, and delightest to come to the feet<sup>4</sup> of wealth.

404.—BY THE SAME

DIOPHANTES with the hydrocele, when he wants to cross to the other side, never gets into the ferry-boat, but putting all his packages and his donkey on the hydrocele, sails across hoisting a sheet. So that in vain have the Tritons glory in the waters if a man with a hydrocele can do the same.

405.—BY THE SAME<sup>5</sup>

CROOK-NOSED Nicon has an admirable nose for wine, but he can't tell quickly what it is like, for scarcely as well as luxuries, but I have no idea what is the "garland" alluded to.

<sup>4</sup> The phrase means also "to serve," and the point of l. 3 also seems to depend on the same double meaning.

BOOK XII

STRATO'S MUSA PUERILIS

STRATO, whose name this book bears, lived probably in the reign of Hadrian. It has generally been supposed that the whole book is an anthology of poems on this peculiar subject made by him, but it seems more probable to me that Strato published merely a collection of his own poems, and that it was Cephalas or some other Byzantine who inserted into it all the poems of this nature he found in the older Anthologies. The final epigram (No 258), which was obviously placed by Strato at the end of his collection, certainly refers only to poems by Strato himself, and the same is true of the words prefixed to the book by Cephalas. He must have derived the statement, unless it is a mere excuse for the immorality of the poems, from some one who had personal knowledge of Strato. Again, among the poems by Meleager included are eight relating to women, six of them being on women whose names end in the diminutive form (Phanion, Callistion, Thermion, Timarion, Dorcion), which has evidently been mistaken for a masculine name. A more ludicrous blunder is the inclusion here of the pretty verses of Asclepiades (No. 50) addressed to himself. Strato himself could never have made such blunders, and they can only be attributed to a Byzantine. Of the poems thus inserted only a very few (12, 18, 24-28, 34, 35, 173) are from the Stephanus of Philippus, the remainder consisting of a large block of poems from Meleager's Stephanus and a few isolated ones from the same source (14, 22, 23, 29-33, 36-172, 230, 256-7). The arrangement under motives is very marked in these. We cannot suppose that Meleager separated the love poems relating to boys in his Stephanus from those relating to women, as the Stephanus was not arranged under subjects at all, and we must attribute both the selection and the arrangement under motives to the Byzantines.

These homosexual attachments were a notable feature of Greek and Roman life and were spoken of frankly, since they were not then regarded as disgraceful, being indeed rather fashionable. Readers must take this into consideration, and especially in estimating Meleager, so much of whose personal work is comprised in this book. It is noteworthy that among the most beautiful of his poems are just some of those I have mentioned addressed to girls and included by mistake here. In the rest, if I err not, we miss the distinguishing note of passion, which his other love-poems so often have. The elements of his imagery of love are all here—Love and His mother, burning arrows and stormy seas—but somewhat devoid of soul and at times disfigured by a coarseness foreign to his gentle spirit. These attachments were in his case rather a matter of fashion than of passion.<sup>1</sup>

STRATO'S MUSA PUERILIS

Strato himself is frankly homosexual. He writes good and at times pretty verse, but he is, as a rule, quite terre à terre and often very gross.

Apply thyself then to what follows, for "in dances," as the tragic poet says, "a chaste woman will not be corrupted."

1.—STRATO

"LET us begin from Zeus," as Aratus said, and ou, O Muses, I trouble not to-day. For if I love boys and associate with boys, what is that to the Muses of Helicon?

2 — BY THE SAME

Look not in my pages for Priam by the altar, nor for the woes of Medea and Niobe, nor for Itys in his chamber and the nightingales amid the leaves; for earlier poets wrote of all these things in profusion But look for sweet Love mingled with the jolly Graces, and for Bacchus. No grave face suits them.

I DELIGHT in the prime of a boy of twelve, but one of thirteen is much more desirable. He who is fourteen is a still sweeter flower of the Loves, and one who is just beginning his fifteenth year is yet more delightful. The sixteenth year is that of the gods, and as for the seventeenth it is not for me, but for Zeus, to seek it. But if one has a desire for those still older, he no longer plays, but now seeks "And answering him back"<sup>1</sup>

Just now, as I was passing the place where they make garlands, I saw a boy interweaving flowers with a bunch of berries. Nor did I pass by unwounded, but standing by him I said quietly, "For how much will you sell me your garland?" He grew redder than his roses, and turning down his head said, "Go right away in case my father sees you." I bought some wreaths as a pretence, and when I reached home crowned the gods, beseeching them to grant me him.

26.—BY THE SAME

If the Polemo I parted from came back to me in safety, I promised to sacrifice to thee. But now Polemo is saved for himself. It is no longer he who has come back to me, Phoebus, and arriving with a beard, he is no longer saved for me. He perhaps prayed himself for his chin to be daubed. Let him then make the sacrifice himself, as he prayed for what was contrary to all my hopes.

27.—BY THE SAME

WHEN I saw Polemo off, his cheeks like thine, Apollo, I promised to sacrifice a fowl if he came back. I do not accept him now his spiteful cheeks are bristly. Luckless wretch that I was to make a vow for the sake of such a man! It is not fair for the innocent fowl to be plucked in vain, or let Polemo be plucked, too, Lord of Delos.

40.—ANONYMOUS

TAKE not off my cloak, Sir, but look on me even as if I were a draped statue with the extremities only of marble. If you wish to see the naked beauty of Antiphilus you will find the rose growing as if on thorns.

41.—MELEAGER

I do not count Thero fair any longer, nor Apollo-dotus, once gleaming like fire, but now already a burnt-out torch. I care for the love of women. Let it be for goat-mounting herds to press in their arms hairy minions.

42.—DIOSCORIDES

WHEN you look on Hermogenes, boy-vulture, have your hands full, and perhaps you will succeed in getting that of which your heart dreams, and will relax the melancholy contraction of your brow. But if you fish for him, committing to the waves a line devoid of a hook, you will pull plenty of water out of the harbour; for neither pity nor shame dwells with an extravagant cinaedus.

43.—CALLIMACHUS

I DETEST poems all about the same trite stories, and do not love a road that carries many this way and that. I hate, too, a beloved who is in circulation, and I do not drink from a fountain. All public things disgust me. Lysanias, yes indeed thou art fair, fair. But before I can say this clearly an echo says, "He is another's."<sup>1</sup>

RICHLY loaded ocean ships that sail down the Hellespont, taking to your bosoms the good North Wind, if haply ye see on the beach of Cos Phanion gazing at the blue sea, give her this message, good ships, that Desire carries me there not on shipboard, but faring on my feet<sup>1</sup>. CHILD of Leto, son of Zeus the great, who utterest oracles to all men, thou art lord of the sea-girt height of Delos; but the lord of the land of Cecrops is Echedemus a second Attic Phoebus whom soft-haired Love lit with lovely bloom. And his city Athens, once mistress of the sea and land, now has made all Greece her slave by beauty.

56.—MELEAGER

PRAXITELES the sculptor wrought a statue of Love in Parian marble, fashioning the son of Cypris. But now Love, the fairest of the gods, making his own image, hath moulded Praxiteles, a living statue, so that the one amid mortals and the other in heaven may be the dispenser of love-charms, and a Love may wield the sceptre on earth as among the immortals. Most blessed the holy city of the Meropes,<sup>1</sup> which nurtured a new Love, son of a god, to be the prince of the young men.

57.—BY THE SAME

PRAXITELES the sculptor of old time wrought a delicate image, but lifeless, the dumb counterfeit of beauty, endowing the stone with form; but this Praxiteles of to-day, creator of living beings by his magic, hath moulded in my heart Love, the rogue of rogues. Perchance, indeed, his name only is the same, but his works are better, since he hath transformed no stone, but the spirit of the mind. Graciously may he mould my character, that when he has formed it he may have within me a temple of Love, even my soul.

BOOK XII. EPIGRAMS 65-68

Lord, I pray thee become no eagle on high to seize him for thy cup-bearer in place of the fair Trojan boy. If ever I have brought thee a gift from the Muses that was dear to thee, grant that the god-like boy may be of one mind with me.

65.—MELEAGER

If Zeus still be he who stole Ganymede in his prime that he might have a cup-bearer of the nectar, I, too, may hide lovely Myiscus in my heart, lest before I know it he swoop on the boy with his wings.

66.—ANONYMOUS

JUDGE, ye Loves, of whom the boy is worthy. If truly of the god, let him have him, for I do not contend with Zeus. But if there is something left for mortals too, say, Loves, whose was Dorotheus and to whom is he now given. Openly they call out that they are in my favour; but he departs. I trust that thou, too, mayst not be attracted to beauty in vain.<sup>1</sup>

67.—ANONYMOUS

I SEE not lovely Dionysius. Has he been taken up to heaven, Father Zeus, to be the second cup-bearer of the immortals? Tell me, eagle, when thy wings beat rapidly over him, how didst thou carry the pretty boy? has he marks from thy claws?

68—MELEAGER

I WISH not Charidemus to be mine; for the fair boy looks to Zeus, as if already serving the god with line is corrupt, and the whole is rather obscure. There was evidently a terrestrial rival in addition to Zeus.

nectar. I wish it not. What profits it me to have the king of heaven as a competitor for victory in love? I am content if only the boy, as he mounts to Olympus, take from earth my tears to wash his feet in memory of my love; and could he but give me one sweet, melting glance and let our lips just meet as I snatch one kiss! Let Zeus have all the rest, as is right; but yet, if he were willing, perchance I, too, should taste ambrosia.

I WILL stand up even against Zeus if he would snatch thee from me, Myiscus, to pour out the nectar for him. And yet Zeus often told me himself, "What dost thou dread? ## BOOK XII. EPIGRAMS 72-75

Euxitheus has run away with you. Yes, when you came here, you rascal, you were looking at the beauty with both eyes.

72.—MELEAGER

SWEET dawn has come, and lying sleepless in the porch Damis is breathing out the little breath he has left, poor wretch, all for having looked on Heraclitus. for he stood under the rays of his eyes like wax thrown on burning coals. But come, awake, all luckless Damis! I myself bear Love's wound, and shed tears for thy tears.

73.—CALLIMACHUS

IT is but the half of my soul that still breathes, and for the other half I know not if it be Love or Death that hath seized on it, only it is gone Is it off again to one of the lads? And yet I told them often, "Receive not, ye young men, the runaway." Seek for it at * *, for I know it is somewhere there that the gallows-bird,<sup>1</sup> the love-lorn, is loitering.

74.—MELEAGER

IF I perish, Cleobulus (for cast, nigh all of me, into the flame of lads' love, I lie, a burnt remnant, in the ashes), I pray thee make the urn drunk with wine ere thou lay it in earth, writing thereon, "Love's gift to Death."

75.—ASCLEPIADES

IF thou hadst wings on thy back, and a bow and arrows in thy hand, not Love, but thou wouldst be described as the son of Cypris nor the barbed arrows of desire dipped in fire, never,

<sup>1</sup> Literally, "who deserves to be stoned to death."

I swear it by the winged boy himself, couldst thou

Love.

If thou wert to grow golden wings above, and on thy silvery shoulders were slung a quiver full of arrows, and thou wert to stand, dear, beside Love in his splendour, never, by Hermes I swear it, would Cypris herself know which is her son.

BOOK XII. EPIGRAMS 81-83

God's sake, No! For God's sake, O thou lover of un wisdom, stir not the fire that yet glows under the ashes! For straightway, O unmindful of past woe, if Love catch thee again, he shall vilely use the truant he has found.

81.—BY THE SAME

LOVE-SICK deceivers of your souls, ye who know the flame of lads' love, having tasted the bitter honey, pour about my heart cold water, cold, and quickly, water from new-melted snow. For I have dared to look on Dionysius. But, fellow-slaves, ere it reach my vitals, put the fire in me out.

82.—BY THE SAME

I MADE haste to escape from Love; but he, lighting a little torch from the ashes, found me in hiding. He bent not his bow, but the tips of his thumb and finger, and breaking off a pinch of fire secretly threw it at me. And from thence the flames rose about me on all sides O Phanion,<sup>1</sup> little light that set ablaze in my heart a great fire.

83.—BY THE SAME

EROS wounded me not with his arrows, nor as erst lighting his torch did he hold it blazing under my heart; but bringing the little torch of Cypris with scented flame, the companion of the Loves in their revels, he struck my eyes with the tip of its flame. The flame has utterly consumed me, and that little torch proved to be a fire of the soul burning in my heart.

<sup>1</sup> In this and the following epigram he plays on her name, which means a little torch.

84.—BY THE SAME

SAVE me, good sirs! No sooner, saved from the sea, have I set foot on land, fresh from my first voyage, than Love drags me here by force, and as if bearing a torch in front of me, turns me to look on the loveliness of a boy. I tread in his footing, and seizing on his sweet image, formed in air, I kiss it sweetly with my lips. Have I then escaped the briny sea but to cross on land the flood of Cypris that is far more bitter?

85.—BY THE SAME

RECEIVE me, ye carousers, the newly landed, escaped from the sea and from robbers, but perishing on land.
For now just as, leaving the ship, I had but set my foot on the earth, violent Love caught me and drags me here, here where I saw the boy go through the gate; and albeit I would not I am borne hither swiftly by my feet moving of their own will. I come thus as a reveller filled with fire about my spirit, not with wine. But, dear strangers, help me a little, help me, strangers, and for the sake of Love the Hospitalite<sup>1</sup> receive me who, nigh to death, supplicate for friendship.

86.—BY THE SAME

It is Cypris, a woman, who casts at us the fire of passion for women, but Love himself rules over desire for males. Whither shall I incline, to the boy or to his mother? I tell you for sure that even Cypris herself will say, “The bold brat wins.”

Two loves, descending on me like the tempest, consume me, Eumachus, and I am caught in the toils of two furious passions. O eyes that cast yourselves in every direction on everything that ye need not, ye looked on Antiochus, conspicuous by his golden charm, the flower of our brilliant youth. It should be enough. Why did ye gaze on sweet and tender Stasicrates, the sapling of violet-crowned Aphrodite ? Take fire, consume, be burnt up once for all ; for the two of you could never win one heart.<sup>2</sup>

92.—MELEAGER

O EYES, betrayers of the soul, boy-hunting hounds, your glances ever smeared with Cypris' bird-lime, ye have seized on another Love, like sheep catching a wolf, or a crow a scorpion, or the ash the fire that smoulders beneath it. Do even what ye will. Why do you shed showers of tears and straight run off again to Hiketas ? Roast yourselves in beauty, consume away now over the fire, for Love is an admirable cook of the soul.

93.—RHIANUS

Not in vain is this saying bruited among mortals,
“The gods have not granted everything to everyone.” Faultless is thy form, in thy eyes is illustrious modesty, and the bloom of grace is on thy bosom. And with all these gifts thou vanquishest the young men; but the gods did not grant to thee to have the same grace in thy feet. But, good Pyrrhus, this boot shall hide thy foot<sup>2</sup> and give joy to thee, proud of its beauty.<sup>3</sup>

97.—ANTIPATER

EUPALAMUS is ruddy red like Love, as far as Meriones,<sup>4</sup> the captain of the Cretans; but from Meriones onwards Podaleirius no longer goes back to the Dawn: see how envious Nature, the universal mother, is. For if his lower parts were equal to his upper he would excel Achilles, the grandson of Aeacus.

98.—POSIDIPPUS

LOVE, tying down the Muses' cicada<sup>5</sup> on a bed of thorns, would lull it there, holding fire<sup>6</sup> under its sides. But the Soul, sore tried of old amid books, makes light of other pain, yet upbraids the ruthless god.

<sup>2</sup> Literally, “the step of thy foot,” indicating that the malformation was in the actual foot, not, e.g. in the ankle.

<sup>4</sup> He means his thighs (meros). In line 5 there is a play on Podaleirius, “lily-rooted,” and so pale and unlike the rosy dawn, but the joke is obscure.

<sup>5</sup> The poet's soul.      <sup>6</sup> i.e. a torch.

99.—ANONYMOUS

I AM caught by Love, I who had never dreamt it, and never had I learnt to feed a male flame hot beneath my heart I am caught Yet it was no longing for evil, but a pure glance, foster-brother of modesty, that burnt me to ashes Let it consume away, the long labour of the Muses; for my mind is cast in the fire, bearing the burden of a sweet pain.

100.—ANONYMOUS

To what strange haven of desire hast thou brought me, Cypris, and pitiest me not, although thou thyself hast experience of the pain? Is it thy will that I should suffer the unbearable and speak this word, “Cypris alone has wounded the man wise in the Muses’ lore”?

101.—MELEAGER

Myiscus, shooting me, whom the Loves could not wound, under the breast with his eyes, shouted out thus: “It is I who have struck him down, the over-bold, and see how I tread underfoot the arrogance of sceptred wisdom that sat on his brow.” But I, just gathering breath enough, said to him, “Dear boy, why art thou astonished? Love brought down Zeus himself from Olympus.”

GODDESS who hauntest Cyprus and Cythera and Miletus and the fair plain of Syria that echoes to the tread of horses, come in gracious mood to Callistion, who never repulsed a lover from her door.<sup>1</sup>

DID I not cry it to thee, my soul, "By Cypris, thou wilt be taken, O thou love-lorn, that fliest again and again to the limed bough"? Did I not cry it? And the snare has caught thee. Why dost thou struggle vainly in thy bonds? Love himself hath bound thy wings and set thee on the fire, and sprays thee with scents when thou faintest, and gives thee when thou art athirst hot tears to drink

132A.—BY THE SAME

O SORE-AFFLICTED soul, now thou burnest in the fire and now thou revivest, recovering thy breath. Why dost thou weep? When thou didst nurse merciless Love in thy bosom knewest thou not that he was being nursed for thy bane? Didst thou not know it? Now learn to know the pay of thy good nursing, receiving from him fire and cold snow therewith Thyself thou hast chosen this; bear the pain. Thou sufferest the due guerdon of what thou hast done, burnt by his boiling honey.

IN summer, when I was athirst, I kissed the tender-fleshed boy and said, when I was free of my parching thirst, “ Father Zeus, dost thou drink the nectareous kiss of Ganymede, and is this the wine he tenders to thy lips ? ” For now that I have kissed Antiochus, fairest of our youth, I have drunk the sweet honey of the soul.

OUR guest has a wound and we knew it not. Sawest thou not with what pain he heaved his breath up from his chest when he drank the third cup ? And all the roses, casting their petals, fell on the ground from the man’s wreaths. There is something burns him fiercely ; by the gods I guess not at random, but a thief myself, I know a thief’s footprints.

word and Nemesis seized me, and at once I lay in the flames and Zeus, in the guise of a boy, rained his lightning on me. Shall I beseech the boy or the goddess for mercy? But to me the boy is greater than the goddess. Let Nemesis go her way.

141.—MELEAGER

By Cypris, thou hast spoken what not even a god might, O spirit, who hast learnt to be too daring. Theron seemed not fair to thee. He seemed not fair to thee, Theron. But thou thyself hast brought it on thee, not dreading even the fiery bolts of Zeus. Wherefore, lo! indignant Nemesis hath exposed thee, once so voluble, to be gazed at, as an example of an unguarded tongue.

142.—RHIANUS

DEXIONICUS, having caught a blackbird with lime under a green plane-tree, held it by the wings, and it, the holy bird,<sup>1</sup> screamed complaining. But I, dear Love, and ye blooming Graces, would fain be even a thrush or a blackbird, so that in his hand I might pour forth my voice and sweet tears.

<sup>2</sup> The verses seem to have been a dialogue between a statue of Hermes in the gymnasium and a stranger, but owing to their mutilation it is difficult to make sense of them. It is evident from the context of No 144 (the poems here being arranged under motives) that the god was represented as being in love.

WHY weepest thou, O stealer of the wits? Why hast thou cast away thy savage bow and arrows, folding thy pair of outstretched wings? Doth Myiscus, ill to combat, burn thee, too, with his eyes? How hard it has been for thee to learn by suffering what evil thou wast wont to do of old!

145.—ANONYMOUS

REST, ye lovers of lads, from your empty labour, cease from your troubles, ye perverse men; we are maddened by never fulfilled hopes. It is like to baling the sea on to the dry land and reckoning the number of grains in the Libyan sand to court the love of boys, whose vainglorious beauty is sweet to men and gods alike. Look on me, all of you, for all my futile toil of the past is as water shed on the dry beach.

Well done, my Hermes!<sup>3</sup> well done, my own! I don’t complain of the twenty days’ delay.

150.—BY THE SAME

How capital the charm for one in love that Polyphemus discovered! Yea, by the Earth, he was not unschooled, the Cyclops. The Muses make Love thin, Philippus; of a truth learning is a medicine that cures every ill. This, I think, is the only good that hunger, too, has to set against its evils, that it extirpates the disease of love for boys. I have plenty of cause for saying to Love “Thy wings are being clipped, my little man. I fear thee not a tiny bit.” For at home I have both the charms for the severe wound.

ever sweet, but often he becomes a sweeter god to lovers when he torments them

154.—MELEAGER

SWEET is the boy, and even the name of Myiscus is sweet to me and full of charm. What excuse have I for not loving? For he is beautiful, by Cypris, entirely beautiful; and if he gives me pain, why, it

BOOK XII. EPIGRAMS 159-162

159.—BY THE SAME

My life's cable, Myiseus, is made fast to thee ; in thee is all the breath that is left to my soul For by thy eyes, dear boy, that speak even to the deaf, and by thy bright brow I swear it, if ever thou lookest at me with a clouded eye I see the winter. but if thy glance be blithe, the sweet spring bursts into bloom.

160.—ANONYMOUS

BRAVELY shall I bear the sharp pain in my vitals and the bond of the cruel fetters For it is not now only, Nicander, that I learn to know the wounds of love, but often have I tasted desire. Do both thou, Adrasteia, and thou, Nemesis, bitterest of the immortals, exact due vengeance for his evil resolve.

161.—ASCLEPIADES

DORCION, who loves to sport with the young men, knows how to cast, like a tender boy, the swift dart of Cypris the Popular, flashing desire from her eye, and over her shoulders . . . with her boy's hat, her chlamys<sup>1</sup> showed her naked thigh.

162.—BY THE SAME

My Love, not yet carrying a bow, or savage, but a tiny child, returns to Cypris, holding a golden writing tablet, and reading from it he lisps the love-charms that Diaulus' boy, Philocrates, used to conquer the soul of Antigenes<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> As the following poems show, this epigram relates to the loves of two young boys, both of whom seem to have been beloved by the poet.

163.—BY THE SAME

LOVE has discovered what beauty to mix with beauty ; not emerald with gold, which neither sparkles nor could ever be its equal, nor ivory with ebony, black with white, but Cleander with Eubiotus, two flowers of Persuasion and Friendship

164.—MELEAGER

SWEET it is to mix with wine the bees' sugary liquor, and sweet to love a boy when oneself is lovely too, even as Alexis now loves soft-haired Cleobulus These two are the immortal metheglin of Cyprus.

165.—BY THE SAME

CLEOBULUS is a white blossom, and Sopolis, who stands opposite him, is of honey tint—the two flower-bearers of Cyprus<sup>1</sup>. . . Therefrom comes my longing for the lads; for the Loves say they wove me of black and white<sup>2</sup>

166.—ASCLEPIADES

LET this that is left of my soul, whatever it be, let this at least, ye Loves, have rest for heaven's sake. Or else no longer shoot me with arrows but with thunderbolts, and make me utterly into ashes and cinders. Yea ! yea ! strike me, ye Loves ; for withered away as I am by distress, I would have from you, if I may have aught, this little gift.

<sup>2</sup> He puns on his name (melas = black, argos = white). There certainly would seem to be a couplet missing in the middle, for “therefrom” can only mean “in consequence of my name.”

bearers. For who is of adamant against love, or who succumbs not to wine, and who does not look curiously at pretty boys? This is the way of living men, but if you like, Diophon, go away to some place where there is no love and no drunkenness, and there induce Tiresias or Tantalus to drink with you, the one to see nothing and the other only to see.

176.—BY THE SAME

Why are you draped down to your ankles in that melancholy fashion, Menippus, you who used to tuck up your dress to your thighs? Or why do you pass me by with downcast eyes and without a word? I know what you are hiding from me They have come, those things I told you would come.

177.—BY THE SAME

LAST evening Moeris, at the hour when we bid good night, embraced me, I know not whether in reality or in a dream. I remember now quite accurately everything else, what he said to me and the questions he asked, but whether he kissed me too or not I am at a loss to know; for if it be true, how is it that I, who then became a god, am walking about on earth?

THOU dost not even take to heart, Artemidorus, what the Avenging Goddesses of Smyrna<sup>1</sup> say to thee, "Nothing beyond due measure," but thou art always acting, talking loud in a tone so arrogant and savage, not even becoming in an actor. Thou shalt remember all this, haughty boy, thou, too, shalt love and play the part of "The barred-out lady."<sup>2</sup>

IF Zeus still carried off mortal boys from earth to the sky to be ministrants of the sweet nectar, an eagle would ere this have borne my lovely Agrippa on his wings to the service of the immortals. For yea, by thyself I swear it, Son of Cronos, Father of the world, if thou lookest on him thou wilt at once find fault with the Phrygian boy of the house of Dardanus.<sup>3</sup>

LOVE hath wrought for thee, Cypris, gathering with his own hands the boy-flowers, a wreath of every blossom to cozen the heart. Into it he wove Di-odorus the sweet lily and Asclepiades the scented white violet. Yea, and thereupon he pleated Hera-clitus when, like a rose, he grew from the thorns, and Dion when he bloomed like the blossom of the vine. He tied on Theron, too, the golden-tressed saffron, and put in Uliades, a sprig of thyme, and soft-haired Myiscus the ever-green olive shoot, and despoiled for it the lovely boughs of Aretas.
